

Lundine, Students Review Legislation

By NORMAN P. GREEN

FREDONIA — Rep. Stanley N. Lundine, D-Jamestown, kicked off his full-time campaign schedule at Fredonia State College Monday in his re-election attempt against the Rev. Crispin Maguire, an Olean Republican.

Meeting with college students during a noon hour discussion and later with a group of political science students, Lun-dine applauded the passage of comprehensive energy legislation during the weekend congressional session.

The congressman said that the legislation approved is quite similar to legislation that he had been pushing for the Congress to approve.

Meeting Lundine's disapproval was the unsuccessful tuition tax credit bill. He commented that the bill died due to the House of Representatives' inclusion of private elementary and high schools in the tax credit bill.

Commenting further, Lundine said that the House is quite willing to compromise on the Senate's bill. He said, though, that he was not sure if President Carter would go along with the bill, due to his contention that the problems of financing college education should be taken care of through present federal loans and grants programs.

The Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA), Lundine said, should be aimed at the private sector, rather than relying on the public sector to be the implementer of the programs. He said that the program should be shaped to the needs of the private sector.

Lundine also blasted the state's civil service system as being too rigid and called for reforms similar to those undertaken by the federal government. He added that it is too bad when an ambitious young person is hemmed into a job with no chance of moving up until it's his or her turn.

Speaking on the responsibility of the federal government entering the state for the possible dumping of radioactive wastes in Southern Tier salt caverns, Lundine said that the federal government had determined that a section of the state near Hammondport would be a possible site, until the state of New York refused to permit test borings of the area.

Turning to West Valley and the abandoned nuclear waste recycling plant located there, Lundine said that a report from the federal Department of Energy would be released in January stating what should be done and to determine the federal government's responsibility.

Lundine said that he hoped the state and federal government would share the cost involved in moving out the nearly 600,000 gallons of nuclear waste. He pointed out that the federal government licensed the plant and the state government permitted and encouraged its operation and for that reason should share all costs involved.

Following the college session, Lundine said that he has been surprised at the campaign of Maguire and that he has done so little spending for media advertisements. He added that he feels that Maguire and he have similar stands on many issues and is surprised how conservative Maguire's stand on the issues has been.
