

Her dancing, suddenly without shoes, became more enthusiastic, as did the audience, when it was back to Maniacs' music with "These Are Days" from Our Time In Eden. Ms. Merchant's version had a calypso beat backed with three sets of drums.

Then it was back into her shoes and back into Tigerlilly material with "Jealousy."

Perhaps it was a tribute to cities named Jamestown when Ms. Merchant really changed things and sang "Fever," Peggy Lee's 1958 hit. And Lee would have approved of Merchant's rendition.

Lee's real name was Norma Engstrom and she was born in Jamestown, N.D.

Speaking of Jamestown, it was never mentioned during the concert by Ms. Merchant, even though she was performing only 60 miles from
