

Civic Center Names 6 Board Members

FEB 21 1999

Six new board members were welcomed onto the Reg Lenna Civic Center's board recently.

Kerry Drew is a student at the State College at Fredonia and has an associate's degree from Jamestown Community College. She said she is looking forward to her term on the center's board.

"I want to do whatever I can to see that the arts thrive in our community for my children to experience and enjoy," Ms. Drew said.

She is a member of the Parents Association at Holy Family School and lives in Jamestown.

Carol Evans is a teacher with the Head Start program and has previously taught at Southwestern Central School and in Fort Campbell, Ky. She has a bachelor's degree in elementary education from Syracuse University. Ms. Evans enjoys directing Christian musicals at St. Luke's Church, is the former past president of Creche Inc., a big sister in the Big Brother-Big Sister program and treasurer of the Lakewood Development Corp.

She said the arts have always been an integral part of her life, from piano and dance lessons as a child to a family of musicians, magicians and artists.

Susan Jones is communications coordinator for the Jamestown Board of Public Utilities and holds an associate's degree in nursing from Amundsen-Mayfair College in Chicago. She is chairwoman of the Professional Communicator's Network and chairwoman of the Chautauqua County chapter of the American Red Cross. Ms. Jones is also a member of the United Way Board and Zonta Club.

She compares the programming of the Reg Lenna Civic Center favorably with the finest in the country and plans to work hard so that the arts continue to be available in this community for years to come.

Murphy Rand is the business manager at Jamestown Computer and holds a marketing and advertising degree from Tobe-Coburn in New York City. She is active in Rotary, is on the Jamestown Business Alliance board and is manager of the Ambassador Program of JOBS Inc. She said she is excited about being on the Civic Center board.

"The arts are always moving,
